

ACCESSING JOURNAL ARTICLES

When the user clicks on a link and is not directed to an online source, a message will appear: “This resource is not available online for free.”

To find out how you can access this resource, please indicate what group you represent and follow the instructions given.

I am a... Select one

- DOH employee
- NYS employee (non-DOH)
- NYS resident
- Physician
- Attorney

I am a...

DOH employee

New York State Department of Health (DOH) employees can obtain copies of articles at the Dickerman Library, located in the Wadsworth Center of the New York State DOH. An article may be available as a PDF that can be saved in electronic form or it can be xeroxed.

New York State DOH employees can also access journals from the databases of the New York State Library on Madison Avenue in Albany. Dickerman Library staff can check if a particular journal is available at the NYS Library.

I am a...

NYS employee (non- DOH)

New York State employees not employed at the DOH can access journals from the databases of the New York State Library on Madison Avenue in Albany. You must first obtain a ‘P Card’ for this purpose.

The other option is to contact your local public library and obtain an article of interest by requesting an inter-library loan from the New York State Library. There is no cost for making this request.

I am a...

Other New York State resident

New York State residents can obtain journals from the databases of the New York State Library on Madison Avenue in Albany. You must first obtain an ‘R’ card.

The other option is to contact your local public library and obtain an article of interest by requesting an inter-library loan from the New York State Library. There is no cost for making this request.

I am a ...

Physician

New York State licensed physicians can access journals from the databases of the New York State Library on Madison Avenue in Albany. You must first obtain a 'P Card' for this purpose.

The other option is to contact your local public library and obtain an article of interest by requesting an inter-library loan from the New York State Library. There is no cost for making this request.

I am a ... Select one

Attorney

New York State attorneys can access journals from the databases of the New York State Library on Madison Avenue in Albany. You must first obtain a 'P Card' for this purpose. The other option is to contact your local public library.